The Alliance at Work

Active House Specification 3.0

The current version 2.0 of the Active House specifications recently turned six years old. Over the past years, many developers, architects and other enthusiasts have worked with the Active House Specifications and applied the Active House vision to both new and retrofit building projects. We have received many positive reactions, and also some questions and suggestions about the current interpretation of the specifications and how they could be applied to specific situations.

In September this year, the international Active House Alliance will present the new and updated version 3.0 of the Active House Specifications at the Active House Symposium in Toronto. Over the coming months, a workgroup will be working hard to update the specifications and make sure that not only they remain relevant, but also that they keep pushing the building industry further towards a more healthy and sustainable built environment. This work will be led by Bas Hasselaar from the Board of Directors.
